My God

My God

Is strong, unwavering, steady,

Not found off-guard by the rhythms of my heart

Knowing they will lead me to Him

Even if they don't seem to

My God

Is faithful, committed, stable,

Not afraid of my journey

For He has already been in my future

Even though I can't see it

My God

Is courageous, unmovable, steadfast,

Not one to run from me

For He knows my heart

Even when it seems dark

My God

Is truth, uncompromised, existing

Not defined by my humanness

For His very being created me

Unafraid to be identified as mine

My God

Always here, present, quietly

Refusing to be offended

For he understands my process

Will lead me to His feet

My God

Comfortable with redemption

Wearing it with his own skin

Longs for me to wear it as

My everyday clothing

My God

Never forgetting His own pain

That frees me from mine

Acquainted with grief and full of sorrows

A seeming contradiction

Of abundant life

My God

Mysterious, beyond understanding,

And yet I taste, and see, and feel, and hear, and touch

Him

As I touch others

And He touches me

Because He longs to cleanse me

And heal me

And cover me

And love me

My God
