

Published based on Truth Brings Freedom

Truth Brings Freedom

Tomorrow I will continue on the temptations of Jesus. Today I want to talk about how the truth brings freedom.

Jesus said, "You will know the truth and the truth will make you free."

There is such warfare over knowing truth. We are often not willing to know truth. We sense that we are wrong about a matter or we have an inner knowing that we are denying truth by not acknowledging it, but we are not willing to experience the discomfort and/or pain that comes by stepping fully into the realm of truth.

Truth is costly. Knowing truth and then acting on truth will cost us. It will cost us convenience and our comfortable paradigms. It will cost us because it requires change.

We all have areas where we need more freedom. Truth is the catalyst which births the freedom. Freedom comes in many ways. Sometimes it is instantaneous. Sometimes it comes like peeling the layers of an onion. Usually both processes are working at the same time.

Even though truth is costly, it carries the fragrance of Christ because Christ is the truth.

You can also find this article published on Truth Brings Freedom